WASHINGTON'S unprecedented Easter season, flowers, sunshine, spring clothes, and gaiety in all circles and kinds, including a week of grand opera, has been a week long to be remembered. It was particularly a period of dancing, for the young people of the smart set swayed every night at a smart ball, except last evening.

The pretty ball at the White House on Monday night was an auspicious opening for the gayeties. Tuesday night there was just as smart a function, the dinner-dance at the German Embassy, in honor of Miss Taft, the next bud of the White House. Wednesday night a champagne ball of brilliance, at the navy yard; Thursday night, the elaborate cotillion given by the bachelor member of the Cabinet, Postmaster General Hitchcock, and Friday the largest dance of the week, the fancy dress cotillion of the naval attaché of the French Embassy and Viscountess d'Azy, at Rauscher's. The President danced at Monday, Wednesday, and Thursday's balls.

Mr. Hitchcock's ball was the handsomest affair of the week in point of favors and souvenirs. The Viscountess d'Azy made her cotillion one long to be remembered by the new and novel figures she introduced and the beautiful fancy dress costumes worn, many of which will be seen at the historic tableaux to be given next Thursday evening by the smart set.

This week will be almost as gay with private dances, beginning with the beautiful ball planned by Senator and Mrs. Elkins for the latter's debutante niece, Miss Katherine Brown. It will be given at Rauscher's. Mrs. James Robert McKee and her two children, Miss Mary Lodge McKee and Benjamin Harrison McKee, daughter and grandchildren of former President Harrison, will come from New York for this ball. They will spend a fortnight with Mrs. Arthur Lee. So many gayeties have been planned in their honor, they can accept few more engagements for lunch and dinner.

Col. and Mrs. Henry May will give a ball for young people at the Country Club on Tuesday evening. There will be a dance at the Chevy Chase Club later in the week, and on Friday night the festivities will end in the hunt ball at the Chevy Chase Club, which will be preceded by a large dinner party. This will really be a cotillion, and the favors and all the appointments will be symbolic of the hunt. This is the first hunt ball which the sport-loving society people of Washington have had for eleven years. The Chevy Chase Club had these affairs during the regime of Maj. George M. Dunn as master.

The dancing season will probably close with the elaborate dance and cotillion which Baron Ambrosy, charge d'affaires of Austria-Hungary, will give in honor of his successor, Baron Lowenthal von Linau, and the latter's bride, who will arrive on the Lusitania about April 14. They were married on March 30. The bride was formerly Countess Nostitz. On this occasion Baron Ambrosy will repay many social obligations on the eve of his departure for Rome, a distinct promotion in the diplomatic service of his country.

Baron Linau is by no means a stranger here, as he has twice served at the embassy, coming here first in 1890, and again in 1907 for a short time. He also served in Tangier, Tokyo, Madrid, Belgrade, and Athens.

The Ambrosy ball will probably rival in beauty and good taste that of the Cabinet bachelor, Postmaster General Hitchcock. The Baron will have for his favors fresh flowers of all kinds for the women, and corresponding bows of ribbon, of blue and red silk, the colors of his coat-of-arms. It will be a real "flower cotillion."

The season is remarkable for bachelor hosts. A Rustem Bey, the popular charge d'affaires of the Ottoman Empire, gave the first bachelors' ball at the Turkish embassy early in the season. This was a brilliant success. Mrs. Draper acted as hostess, a short time before the fatal illness of Gen. Draper.

The Drapers are remaining in Washington longer than they had expected to. Mrs. Draper and her daughter, Miss Margaret Preston Draper, intended sailing about the middle of last month for Italy, where they have hosts of friends, and where they lived for many years during the daughter's childhood. She is the second of the season's buds to withdraw from the gayeties of her circle, because of the death of her father. The first was Miss Louise Cromwell, whose father, Oliver Cromwell, died a few weeks before Gen. Draper, and just on the eve of her debut in society. Miss Cromwell and her mother have returned here from Los Angeles to spend the spring season.
